Obituary.

JAMES PRICE, Esq., M.R.C.S., OF HEREFORD.

MR. PRICE was the professional Nestor of the county of Hereford, where for fifty-three years he had been in practice, after doing a fair life's work in active service as prelude to the half century of toil which only ended with his life. He was born in Hereford, where, at the ripe age of fourscore years, he died on the 24th of October, passing away gently and painlessly, without any of the long weariness which protracted illness brings to age, without any of that flickering of the lamp of life which makes old age itself one long disease.

He studied at St. Bartholomew's, passed the examination at Surgeons' Hall for the East India Company's service in 1803, and for two years did duty as a ship-surgeon. In 1806 he obtained his diploma, and was appointed assistant-surgeon in the Artillery. He went on foreign service in the following year, returning in 1808 in time to join Sir John Moore's expedition, which sailed in the early part of that year. He accompanied the troops under this commander until the time of the memorable retreat on Corunna, and was present at the battle. He received his medal for this engagement in 1849, forty years after the conclusion of peace. He retired from the army, and commenced practice in his native city in 1810. In 1818 he became the honorary secretary of the local Medical Society, and held the appointment until his death. He died "with armour on his back," continuing the practice of his profession until within a few days of his decease. His gentle kindly disposition endeared him to all, nor had the many hardships he endured in that terrible campaign at all hardened the natural courtesy and urbanity of his manner. He educated a son to succeed him in practice; but this hope was blighted by the young man's death, whilst yet at the threshold and about to commence his career. Mr. Price was highly respected by his fellow-townsmen and brother-professionals.
